

Baltimore Green Space

A Land Trust for Community-managed Open Space

Land Security for Community Open Spaces

Tuesday, June 19, 6 – 8 pm

3505 N. Charles Street, Baltimore 21218

Want to make sure your neighborhood's beloved community open space lasts forever?

Join Baltimore Green Space to learn about land security!
We will go over the basics of preservation with Baltimore Green Space.

We're also collecting information about green spaces to make sure that City government does not sell the land inadvertently. The City reserves the right to sell land that is in an adopt-a-lot agreement –but it is less likely to sell land if Baltimore Green Space has determined that the land is in active community use.

So please help us to help you!

Bring what information you have; we can work with you on the rest.

Info we pass on to City government:

- Name of community-managed open space
- Address and Block/lot numbers
- Whether it is a garden or “clean and green” or forested
- Year started

Hosted by the Community Greening Resource Network (CGRN) and by Greater Homewood Community Corporation. CGRN provides a comprehensive and consistent support network making it easier to maintain the valuable green spaces in your community. For a nominal yearly fee, CGRN provides access to the materials, resources, education, and connections gardens need to have a successful and sustainable green space. Greater Homewood builds and strengthens vibrant urban communities in north central Baltimore.
